How to Extract Data: There are four different ways that data can be extracted from a website using A1

Website Analyzer: * View Source code * HTML Only * Character Set * raw Text

1. View Source Code Once you load the main pages of a website into A1 Website Analyzer, the program automatically saves the main page in a file for you to view the source. Just double-click the main page and you can view the source in an editor such as notepad.
2. HTML Only This option allows you to view a page in its HTML form. You do not have to load the website into A1 Website Analyzer to view this page, however you can load it into a web browser if you choose to. For example, if you would like to see what a page on a website looks like when it is visited in a web browser, you would load that page into your web browser. You would then load that web page into A1 Website Analyzer so that you can view it in the HTML format. 3. Character Set This option allows you to view a website in its character set. This allows you to view a website in its original language, or if the website was created in a different language, you can view it in that language. You can only view a character set via this option, it does not allow you to view the actual data. For example,
