What's New In Intonia?

Intonia is a pitch recorder and a tuner, that enables a professional musician to detect pitch errors and correct their mistakes easily. It is designed to be used by string players and musicians to improve their accuracy on the pitch, whether performing or recording. What is pitch and intonation? "Pitch" is a reference to the frequency of sound, i.e. the pitch of a note. Different tones or notes have a different pitch, which is the basis to the interval classifications. "Pitch" and "intonation" were already used before the modern era to define a musical note, which is its frequency. Intonation is the correct pitch of the note played in relation to the preceding and following note. In this way, a correct intonation will generate a harmonic sound, while an incorrect intonation will produce a "clang" sound. Pitch is not a number, but a "frequency", a number between 0 and some value. The lower the number the higher is the pitch. However, it is not a static number, but a function of time. A note played at 100 Hz is pitch A4. However, as time goes by the pitch will decrease down to another value. When the note is over it will return to the pitch it had in the beginning. This means that at the end of an octave, the pitch will be the same, but it will be one semitone lower. Measuring pitch In order to measure the pitch you need a tool. In an instrument such as a piano, there is a hammer that strikes the strings, and it is the hammer's speed that determines how the pitch is measured. In a guitar, on the other hand, the strings are attached to the guitar neck and they vibrate when plucked by the fretting hand. The length of the string determines how far the string vibrates and in turn how much frequency it produces. When the guitar string is bowed, one or more of its natural frequencies will be excited. The frequency at which it is vibrating is its frequency and the best way to measure the pitch is by looking at its period, which is the time it takes for one vibration cycle. Intonia: The first pitch recorder Intonia was created to be a tool for musicians and we wanted it to be the best one. It is a digital device that enables the musician to see the pitch and play the sounds at any time. Of course, we provide an intuitive graphical interface in order to
