chapter 5 explores the audio and mixer environments, as well as the audio equipment we use, with sections on headphones, speaker systems, microphones, line-level electronics, daws, and studio equipment. i found this section quite useful, as it helps to explain some of the terminology that i've struggled to find information about online. stavrou writes that the studio is 'a well-constructed space that enables you to record and mix at your best.' chapter 6 is very useful, as it contains advice on how to set up your tracking and recording environment. it covers mic technique, microphone placement and the need for close monitoring and feedback. it also includes a detailed description of the q-activespace mic preamps, and how to set these up to best suit your workflow. the chapter also mentions the use of a headphone amplifier, which i think is a very useful piece of kit. chapter 7 introduces the mixing process, including ideas on how to record and mix the drum tracks. it's here that stavrou really hits home, as he explains how the different aspects of the drum track can be combined to produce a sound that is unique to your production. the chapter finishes with a section on the mastering process, and one of the more interesting elements of the book - stavrou's advice on how to send a rough mix to mastering engineer. if you are a producer and wish to use the image in relation to your work, you must notify us in writing of your intent before you use the image and agree to the terms of the licence. where we believe you are intending to exploit the image commercially in a way that is not permissible under these terms, we may terminate your licence. if you are not sure whether you need to use the image, you should seek advice from a legal professional.

dont be afraid to ask for referrals. if youre applying for a job or a promotion and want to make sure youre really a good match for the organization, a personal referral from someone already employed with the company is a great way to get a leg up. of course, you need to make sure your referral is someone who knows you and who can be trusted. after all, some of us are better liked than others, and if your referral doesnt know everything about you, there may be things about you that could be harmful to your application. research shows that when someone offers to buy you a drink, youre less likely to divulge information. in fact, by offering to buy us a drink, were more likely to be guarded and less likely to disclose sensitive information. how many times have you been asked a question, or had a more senior employee ask you a question, and youre now unsure how to answer it? youll be less likely to disclose information if your drink is offered to you. it is easy to make money when we are young. the younger we are, the more money we will earn. when we have children, the more money we will make. money is often the only thing that motivates us. but as we get older, we find that we have to learn to get along with other people. when we reach our 50s, then we have to learn to do what others want. then, we reach our 60s. then, we reach our 70s. then we reach our 80s and then our 90s. people who are flexible in their thinking are more likely to find a job. it is better to be flexible in your thinking. flexible thinking is often a trait found in people who are good at learning new things, since they are more open to new experiences, ideas, and ways of doing things. flexible thinking is often associated with creativity. 5ec8ef588b
